

“Early detection is the first and often most important step in beating breast cancer. I fought to expand access to vital screenings to help more New Yorkers get the health care they need.”

–Assemblymember Robinson

Assemblymember Robinson is helping New Yorkers fight breast cancer

Robinson passed a law to make breast cancer screenings more accessible and affordable so cases are caught in the earliest, most treatable stages (A.10679). The measure:

-  Improves insurance coverage by prohibiting annual deductibles, co-payments and co-insurance payments for mammograms, breast ultrasounds and MRIs
-  Requires extended hours of screening at more hospitals and clinics
-  Gives New York City public employees the right to paid leave for screenings
