A Lifelong Western New York Resident

Has always worked to protect New Yorkers by holding various positions with two area sheriff's departments, and fighting waste, fraud and abuse as the Deputy Inspector General for the state in charge of the Western New York region.

Understands that streamlining government bureaucracies, eliminating red tape and burdensome regulations, reducing the tax burden and creating opportunities for private-sector businesses to create jobs are the most important steps we can take to grow our economy.

Continues to work for families in Cattaraugus, Allegany and Steuben counties by acting as their delegate to the State Assembly so they may protect their bottom lines and ensure that children have the education they deserve so they can start a future here at home.
