As early as the civil war in the late 1860s, we have commemorated those individuals who have sacrificed their lives to allow us the freedoms our country enjoys today. We are used to our way of life, often without thought of the security and safety that the united state military brings to U.S. soil. Today we honor those men and women whose lives were lost to keep us safe. We acknowledge the families who have shared their loved ones and understand the importance of such sacrifice.

Where ever you are today, stop and join in for a national moment of remembrance at 3:00pm to acknowledge the heroes who have fallen.
