COMMUNITY LENDING A HAND AMID A PANDEMIC

COVID-19 has touched every part of our community and disrupted our way of life.

Amid the public health crisis and economic downturn, we have seen tremendous examples of bravery and generosity. Caring individuals, businesses, and organizations have all stepped up to offer support and resources when they have been needed most.

Our frontline healthcare workers and first responders have put their lives on the line - some of whom have traveled to the epicenter of this outbreak - to care for people with the virus.

Community members have made or purchased masks and other protective equipment so essential workers are safe. Local schoolchildren and others have created food drives for those in need. Individuals and businesses have purchased meals for essential workers to let them know they are appreciated. Small businesses have brought great relief to many on a larger scale, giving us new reasons to buy local.

Our area is known for its caring spirit and this crisis has reinforced that fact once again. While we do not know what the future holds, if we continue helping each other, we will overcome this challenge and recover even stronger than before.

In addition to great individuals and small businesses, we also have public and community organizations that work collaboratively to provide resources for all those in need.
