WORKING FOR A brighter TOMORROW

In 2017, the New York State Legislature made great progress to benefit the hard-working residents of the state. We're just beginning the 2018 Legislative Session, and I plan to hit the ground running to tackle the issues that mean the most to you. This year I will continue working to eliminate corruption in government, fight the heroin and opioid crisis, and fight for policies that help keep more of your hard-earned money in your pocket.

on workplace development programs, we can generate skilled labor and allow more high school graduates to acquire head-of-household positions. We should also evaluate our current programs and identify which are most effective. Eliminating ineffective programs will result in a streamlined training process and more skilled labor statewide.

Restoring the people's trust in government and holding corrupt officials responsible for their actions is the very reason I decided I wanted to step up and make a difference in Albany. Last year, lawmakers passed measures to limit widespread corruption in state government. A measure to strip all corrupt public officials of their taxpayer-funded pensions was an important first step toward establishing ethics in government, but we have a long way to go.

Today, many New Yorkers are unfortunately plagued by heroin and opioid addiction. In order to stop this major drug problem, we should work together to stop it from spreading in our communities. We must first hold the dealers who continue to flood our streets with dangerous drugs accountable for their criminal actions. Additional services to help those affected by addiction should also be offered to ensure that people are given proper help and care.

During the next 6 months, I will push for common-sense ethics reform to enact term limits on government officials and restrict special interest money influencing campaigns. With collaboration from the entire Legislature, we can establish an open and transparent government.

I am eager to hear from you during the next few months about ways you think I can better help our community. With your help, we will build better lives for every resident in our district. Together, we can make this legislative session a great success.

I also plan to advocate for improved workplace development programs. There are many job openings throughout the state that require various skill sets, but we don't have enough skilled workers to fill them all. With more emphasis
