

Hi,

My name is Pamela Joy Eisman aka Pamela Joy.

I happily live at 253 East 10th St in NYC.

I moved in the first week in November in 1980, when Reagan had won the presidency.

That was a pivotal moment in time for our country and society as a whole.

Indeed it was a very significant time for me since 253 East 10th St. in NYC was and still is what I consider to be my very first home.

I am a late blooming person. Coming into my own as a Senior Citizen, as it were.

Having traveled long and far in my quest for understanding and inner integration.

Now at last, I am really and truly in the midst of making a comprehensive big step towards building my private practice, successfully as an Astrologer & Astrological Life Coach.

Here I am building a viable private practice on my own steam, with my own hard work, integrity and fortitude. I am fueled by my studies, knowledge, intuitive understanding and deep commitment. Fired up by utter determination to put my services out there and to help and serve in the way I know how.

All this while in the heart of a transforming economy in the midst of a global pandemic.

Perhaps just the beginning of many more.

I believe very strongly that one of the ways this can be prevented is for there to be an absolute forgiveness of past debt.

I myself must stay housed so I can keep my health and not be contagious to my fellow tenants and neighbors.

Rent must be forgiven at this most crucial time when homelessness is a suicide/ homicide ride.

My home is a place of balance, stability and health out of which my work can grow and I can pay my rent regularly as part of maintaining the balance and stability.

I do work that can help others which then allows me to contribute to the greater good in ways I look forward to continuing to do.

I am sure those of us who are late bloomers, or have worked in jobs that have become obsolete, or perhaps have other issues that slow the relationship to work and making money are validated in the above sentiments I expressed.

No matter, this is the wake up call moment to think in an "all across the way of thinking and doing", in order to meet all on every level.

Evidenced time has clearly shown us, at this moment of crisis that trickle down economics does not work.

Bottom up is how we all get nourished.

It's also how we all prosper, consistently in health and stability.

Making sure folks keep their homes and communities of people who are healthy due to living balanced lives is where true prosperity is at. That also includes viable, livable good housing for the homeless.

The legislation to forgive rent is a step towards health and prosperity for all.

Now it must be so!

Thank-you.

Sincerely,

Pamela Joy Eisman
