Social media is a destructive platform that is taking away from youth in today's society by, creating addiction, exposing personalized data, and destroying the mind. Social media creates addiction. Personalized data has been exposed on algorithmic platforms. Social media is destroying young minds. The two bills by Governor Kathy Hochul and Attorney General Letitia James can shape our future into the enlightenment of evolution.

Social media creates addiction in the mind by driving the brain to produce dopamine because of the feeling of pleasure being released in the neurons. For example, social media has unstructured the ability to think and sleep as children are being manipulated by the platforms built to affect youth. Algorithms are manipulative to the brain as optogenetics has proven that the light being produced by algorithms controls the neurons. The brain has been disrupted from the ability the shut down when it needs to. Social media platforms have provided children with feeds that destroy their psychological and intrapersonal abilities, these effects have interfered with their self-esteem and rejected the uniqueness of individuality. Social media has struck a lack of self-awareness in women, which has boosted the rate of suicide and destroyed the clarity in women. As a result, The Stop Addictive Feeds Exploration for Kids Act can reject the destructive effects of social media and open the doors of a new path.

Personalized data has been exposed on algorithmic platforms and is creating an invasion of privacy of child users on social media. For example, In modern-day society, current global situations have resulted in the actions of children sharing their private and personal information through social media, which can have an undesirable effect on their lives. However, Governor Kathy Hochul and Attorney General, Letitia James are passing two bills to prevent these detrimental outcomes on youth. The second bill, “The New York Child Data Act” has been proven to protect children's private information from being shared with other platforms, sites, or people. This act will allow parents to be able to control their children's social media accounts because of the lack of attention that is spent. Additionally, children can be able to have a different path in becoming a target of mental illness.

Social media is destroying the young minds of society because it is taking away from the unique values and clarity of children. For example, the understanding of identity has been tucked away from children, and are allowing societal standards such as double consciousness to dictate their personal beliefs and actions. The women in society are being affected mostly because they feel the need to change themselves because of other's views. The features of social media are dictating and manipulating young minds and are creating mental illness to become the new normal. Mental illness is predominantly affecting Americans as we become targets of social media and are being taken away from self-esteem. In addition, The two bills are proven to free children from being manipulated and dictated.

The two bills by Governor Kathy Hochul and Attorney General Letitia James can shape our future into the enlightenment of evolution. The two bills, “Stop Addictive Feeds Exploration for Kids Act” and “New York Child Data Protection Act” can guide youth to a better future and freedom from mental entrapment. “The mind is a terrible thing to waste”, the minds of children can be healed by accepting themselves and finding their clarity. The use of parents monitoring social media platforms can build a better understanding and environment, to allow Americans to take a step of evolution. The use of inner engineering can allow children to understand themselves and reject the need of pleasure to find peace, freedom, and clarity from algorithm.
